Five Tips for Talking to Children About Baptism

1. Explain that although there are many different ways, times, and places to be baptized, those differences are not really important. What matters is that in baptism, we all belong to God.
2. Tell the child that no matter how or where or when we are baptized, water is always used. Water is a powerful symbol in the Bible. Brainstorm together all the Bible stories you can remember that involve water. (The parting of the Red Sea/Baby Moses in the Nile/ Jesus' own baptism/ Turning water into wine/ The woman at the well etc.)
3. As you look at the pictures in the book, encourage the child's natural curiosity and wonder. 'Wondering questions' are a great way to allow the child to ponder the meaning and mystery of baptism. Examples might be:

I Wonder why Jesus decided to be baptized...

I Wonder why a dove flew down...

I Wonder why water is so important...

I Wonder how God feels when someone is baptized...

4. If your child has an opportunity to be present at a baptism, make sure they can hear and see what is happening. Initiate a conversation about it afterwards and encourage their questions. Ask how it made them feel/ how they think the person's family felt/ how the pastor might have felt.
5. If children have questions about baptism that you don't know the answer to, don't be afraid to say something like: That's a great question. I'm not sure. Let's ask our pastor about that.

Older children may like to compare the different gospel accounts of Jesus' baptism found in Matthew 3:13-17/ Mark 1:9-11/ Luke 3:21-22
